Note that Photoshop is an image-editing program, not a design program. Also, Photoshop Elements is optimized for use on a computer with a screen size of 10 inches or less and has fewer tools than Photoshop. Photoshop's tool bar includes most of the tools that you'd find in Elements. Capturing a low-tech image The camera has become a significant tool for capturing natural photographs of everyday people. There are many places where you can find beautiful landscape and people photography in part because people are so candid and willing to be photographed. However, sometimes you find yourself in places where you don't have a camera, or at least where the view is not so inviting — the stockroom at Wal-Mart, the train station, a cemetery, an airline check-in counter, a parking lot, and so on. Here are some things to remember when looking for a low-tech photo: Go to the place early. If you try to be stealthy, you may end up disappointed, because everyone is looking for a camera and you may find that their actions hinder your artistic vision. Ask people about the area. If they know what you're looking for, tell them what you're after, and ask them to point you in the right direction. You may be shocked at how many people have pictures of their hometown, or even just a local park, that are terrific. Ask around for a group of people. If you walk into a busy lunch or dinner, talk to the people who are eating and ask them if they have any interesting shots. Photojournalists sometimes are conscious of preserving their images, so if you ask them upfront they may be more willing to share them. Take a small notepad and pen, but do ask them first. Going digital Digital cameras have dramatically changed the world of photography. Their small size and ease of use have made them ubiquitous. You can find them in your car, purse, wallet, and remote locations. In addition, the emergence of smartphones with built-in cameras has become a regular part of many people's everyday lives, and digital cameras are no longer considered only a high-end tool. Photographers used to be the gatekeepers of the technology. A few were experts in the exposure techniques and creative use of light and lens. However, today's cameras are much more user-friendly, and anyone can make good images when they understand composition, lens selection, and camera settings. Moving to digital photography

1. Create a new document or open an existing image When you first open the program, Photoshop Elements opens in either a predefined desktop mode or in full-screen mode. Navigate to the File menu on the menu bar and select New from the drop-down menu. On the Files & Folders screen, select the photo, picture or other file you want to use. You can also drag a file directly into the program window. A new document (empty canvas) is created. 2. Edit an existing image You can use Photoshop Elements to edit an existing image. Navigate to the File menu and select Open. Select an image file you want to work with from the Files & Folders list. On the Open screen, click the image file you want to work with and the photo opens in the Photoshop Elements window. To edit an image, use the tools shown in the following sections. To open a new file from the existing image, select the image layer shown in the image below. This is the area to edit the image. Selecting this layer opens a new document (empty canvas). 3. Select tools With the standard Adobe Photoshop tools, you can shape and adjust the size and position of each part of the image. Crop tool Use the Crop tool to trim, crop, or adjust the overall size of an image. The crop tool is the main tool for editing. Use it to remove a portion of the image. Or, for example, crop an image to include only the upper-left corner.

You can use the Crop tool to trim an image to remove a border around the canvas, or to crop the whole image to remove backgrounds. The Crop tool works by turning the four handles in the upper-left corner of the image into a rectangle. The Crop tool can also be used to crop an area around a specified point. For example, you can crop an image to include a certain part of the image. Use the Crop tool to trim, crop, or adjust the overall size of an image. 3a. Size & proportion You can adjust the size and proportion of an image with the Size and Proportion tools. The Size tool gives you control over the width and height of an image. You can resize a photo to a specific percentage of the original size. Or you can 388ed7b0c7

The Ranger at Night "The Ranger at Night" is a popular song composed in 1902 by Louis Gruenberg (music) and Edward Eliscu (lyrics) for vaudeville performances, with an important role in the large Broadway musical revue The Chocolate Soldier (1902). Historical background The Chocolate Soldier was a production of the Theatre Owners Booking Association, the trade organization representing live theatre. (TOBA broke up in 1905, when American theatre owners began to compete directly with the established London playhouses.) The Chocolate Soldier was organized to publicize the new "musical comedy" style of theatre, and a big hit, with music by Paul Whiteman and a book by B. G. De Sylva. The show debuted at the Brunswick Theatre in New York on November 2, 1902, and had 4,063 performances in its first year. Unlike most musicals of the time, The Chocolate Soldier was not a collection of songs for the performer. It had elaborate settings and production numbers, and these were choreographed to accompany the songs. Performers of the show included Lillian Russell and Al Jolson. Part I of the show was so popular that it was performed in Paris in 1905, and it spawned local versions throughout the United States. The 1939 classic movie South Pacific, the musical, and the 1961 Disney movie Sleeping Beauty, have been cited as "inspired by" the Chocolate Soldier. In 2002, after being out of print for more than 30 years, the song was included on the 2002 Greatest Hits, the first compilation of the 2002 Broadway revival of The Chocolate Soldier. Other songs on the compilation, from the same show, include: "The Love of a Heroine" by Ella Logan and Will D. Cobb; "Farewell" by Sigmund Romberg and Will D. Cobb; and "My One and Only Love" by Alfred Bryan and Adrian Ross. 1902 Broadway revival In a 2002 revival, "The Ranger at Night" was performed by Lilli Palmer and David Alan Grier. Summary A young couple, Sarah and Arthur Drexel (both played by Lilli Palmer), are having a romantic evening at the Jersey Shore. During dinner, Arthur succumbs to a bout of nostalgia for his youth in Paris. In a blue reverie, he conjures the recollection of his first time with a certain "first lady," named "Marguerite"

What's New In?

Sunday, August 1, 2010 My first vintage in over two decades... I used to love digging through second hand stores, I'd pull out all the old records, buttons, napkins, aprons, kids clothes and tiny antiques. I'd be astonished at all the history in such little things. Nowadays as I try to downsize, I pull out whatever I can fit in my suitcase and carry it all home, knowing that it will look great in my renovated kitchen. When my parents moved into their new place, my mom hauled me to the Little House on the Prairie Treasures down the road in Mona. The store sells miniature everything, and my mom knew she had to get me something to really make an impression. I was about to move in with my "husband" and wanted to show her I wasn't just a nanny, but someone who enjoyed all the comforts of home. I told her to find me a vintage table that I'd end up hanging in the kitchen. She found the perfect one from the U-Haul Ranch, the perfect tabletop for a lady who loves country cooking. She was very excited as she brought it home. She loved it and we had such fun building a place for the table with a little fabric she'd already picked out. Five years later, I need a new table, this one's had it's day. I couldn't resist this olive table, after all it is part of my dream kitchen. The color, flowers, and plate all are perfect for my dream kitchen. About Me We found ourselves in the urban renewal of San Diego's East Village in 2003. From the '50's onward, ours was a neighborhood of rehabs and motels, built by the military to house their families while they were away. We've had our share of laughter and tears as we've lived there for 11 years. Now, we're back on a gorgeous balcony in San Diego's Downtown Arts District. We dream of cooking country food again and spending hours together while catching up on our families, travels, and favorite TV shows. We love Spring and Summer gardening, quiet evenings at home, and most of all, traveling to visit the heart of our country, the American Southwest. Follow my blog!
