Players will be able to accelerate, decelerate, spin and move from any direction during gameplay, making the ball move realistically in-game. The same data will be used in all modes, so no additional data will be collected for Career Mode, or for eSports game modes such as FIFA Ultimate Team. Fans will also be able to record their favourite goals and highlights in FIFA Ultimate Team to keep their moments to last. Furthermore, players will be able to stream their match highlights, goals and moves on social media, through Twitch and Facebook. The additions are a part of FIFA 19's "Ultimate Team" introduced in December, which added new cards (including 24 new global skill cards, 48 new club cards, 88 new player cards and 46 new player ability cards) and boosted the efficiency of Ultimate Team by introducing new matchmaker and the weekly/monthly/seasonal FIFA Ultimate Team Leagues. FIFA 19 sold over 27 million units to date, becoming the best-selling sports video game on all platforms.
