Knossos is a game of mazes, as the title says. You can have the game generate a random maze for you, of a size and difficulty of your choosing, or make your own to challenge your friends. You start at one corner of the maze, and the goal is to find the exit at the opposite corner and escape. You get a 3D first person view of the maze, as if you were inside it. You can make a 2D maze, a 3D maze, or even a higher dimensional maze of 4 dimensions or more. Knossos is pure freeform, no puzzles, no scores, just a game about mazes and solving mazes. The maze isn't an obstacle, it's just there. You can lay out your maze however you like, no specific constraints. The rules of the game are simple, the goal is to escape the maze. You have one weapon: a mouse cursor controlled with the mouse. There are different levels of difficulty, ranging from so simple that the whole point is just to have fun to so hard that you'll have a genuine challenge. You can skip levels if you like, it's entirely up to you. The game offers two modes: the arcade mode for playing a simple level of difficulty, and a more challenging mode for playing the hardest level that your computer will support. This mode is also the only way you can play with multiple computers in a LAN environment. The purpose of this mode is to test the limits of your computer's memory. In the arcade mode your computer will use only 512Mb of memory to solve a maze, in the LAN mode the computers will each use 512Mb of memory, each one will be playing against itself. History Knossos is originally an Apache project that I posted to Sourceforge in 2004. I thought it was an excellent game, and I was hoping to be able to distribute it to others, so that you can play it on your PC. However, I found that Sourceforge users are not very interested in games, and more interested in things like video editing and file sharing. It took me a year and a half to find a new home for Knossos, and it finally landed at Open Game Art in December 2006. It is now much more than a simple game. You are now able to create your own Knossos mazes, create your own designs using a Knossos maze generator, and play with your friends c9d1549cdd

1899. Europe is in the grip of a great influenza epidemic, and the Black Death rages on. Humanity is on the brink of disaster, and only you, the Last Knight, can restore the balance. Artillery can be purchased at any of the four rai (Rancho, Train, Air, and Water), and each can be upgraded four times, unlocking new weapons. As you fight your way across a meticulously crafted world, you'll be surrounded by men and monsters who want to use their weapons against you, and unfortunately, there's no weapon damage/armor penetration option... yet. It's time for the next step, and your first real weapon, the Redder. It's your ticket to vengeance, and perhaps even glory. Multiplayer: Cooperative/Deckbuilder, vs. AI and/or LAN/Host/Player, with custom lobbies, as well as bots, match bots, and a custom "chess" game. Please leave a feedback on multiplayer. It's still in development and is more than welcome, and you'll help us a lot more. When we release it, we'll be in touch with you through Steam! AI: 4 Difficulty levels: Easy, Normal, Hard, Insane. Difficulty is 1/10 of your points. The AI will re-learn itself. Perks are available in the level creation tool. Weapon Model: A whole new weapon model for the Battle of the Bulge. Loadout, Coop/Deckbuilder, Item, Improvement, Boss and more improvements on the to be released in the next chapters. Game Over & Restart: Game Over, Restart, and Save are completely revamped. Gameplay: Single Player Game, Layers mode and more realism is coming to the combat, including artillery No random maps in the battle of the bulge. There will be new perks to unlock that will give a different power to the player at some point. Multiplayer unlocks and other quest will be available for all of them. Map Differences: Each Map or Stage is designed and coded by a different person. We've worked really hard to make the maps visually different each of them. We are no way near done, but we want to make the best we can. We already have artillery in the game for the single
