the seashore uses the traditional art of making waves to encourage designers to dream up their own original ocean-inspired environments and textures. for today's designers, it is vital to remember the importance of sustainability and innovative thinking. as a result, the seashore offers 10,000 sound samples that can be used to simulate what nature sounds and how the wind blows. designers can design their own ocean environments, flora, and beach flora sounds for their projects and share them with friends online. the seashore is a new library for motu nks ii that extends the popular seashore lfo parameters into a comprehensive library of instrument-ready synthesizers. 10,000 sound samples are included, and can be used to simulate the sounds of the ocean, wind, waves, and sounds of beaches and wilderness. eltek 1288 was designed as an all-in-one sound & music production setup that was responsive, full featured, and cutting edge. in addition to professional vst plugins, eltek 1288 features a high-quality interface, compact design, and impressive connectivity for music production, live performance, or studio. the eltek 1288 is equipped with a powerful dual-channel eq for both preamps and individual headphone amps, intuitive controls, high-quality build and components, along with gold-certified desktop and modular power supplies and power supplies. the premium version of the sound expander module integrates with roland's existing v-synth line for roland music production system (rms) users. the two modules work together to allow users to expand the voice of the instrument with roland's sound expander software. dual high-resolution headphone amps offer exceptional detail, while streamlined interfaces and no-nonsense controls help keep a musical creative flow. the sound expander module also features the option to add a 1/4" monitor or line out input with a choice of 24-bit/96 khz or 16-bit/96 khz direct output and a high-efficiency 24-bit audio interface for professional audio connections. an integrated usb port provides additional connectivity to a computer or mobile device.

the gaia vco mode generally allows for very slow modulation - up to thousands of beats per second. however, i like to focus on a limited subset of possibilities for my students in the vco mode. i teach them the basic waveforms and they program their own sets. we discuss the theory in intervals of beats per second up to whatever the student wants. the generic waves are their starting point and over time the student builds their own set. i like to stick to simple vco modes to allow the students to write the notes themselves. this allows them to capture their sound in an immediate and inspiring way, and as an added bonus it allows them to lose the scale quickly. it is rarely useful to scale complex waveforms, so i typically limit my students to two or three simple types. once the wave is set, i let them choose the voice their oscillator will use. i usually set one to be a square wave and the other to be a sawtooth. i then ask them to choose the band pass filter to connect them using a preset envelope. there are many different approaches to learning synthesis, and this is one of the areas that i have found to be most rewarding. this approach is focused on creating usable patches, and not a particular model. i use the gaia as a guide in my teaching, but it can be used anywhere. so, in terms of the gaia itself, the sequencer is unique, and so are the arpeggiator. i like to show off some complex arpeggio routines to demonstrate what can be done using the sequencer. the sequencer also has a huge potential for anything from complex chord and scale patterns to melody and arpeggio ideas. perhaps it is most impactful for generating grooves. creating and arranging grooves is a key skill for musicians. 5ec8ef588b
