The games arsenal has also been bolstered by the addition of some direct, studio-made mobile games under the Netflix banner. Titles including Homecoming: End of the Rainbow, coming to both iOS and Android devices, and Poppy Techs, an action-puzzle game that was also released on iPad and Touch devices and was later ported to Android, have generally been well-received by the public and have generated significant player traffic. If you don't want to use the emulator, another option is going to the Netflix web site and the on-device search feature to find the particular show or movie you want to download. Once you have located the right video, all you have to do to download it is click the download button. Our Netflix web site method does not require an emulator or SDK. The process is simple, just go to the web site, search for the movie or show you want to download, click on it and download. The web site method does not require a password or that the download link has been clicked and does not require a memory card. All you need to do is select the download link in the web browser and do not need to enter a code. The update process is really quite simple, its just as easy to tell where all the files are on your device. While this download feature came as part of the release of Zinitevi 2.0, with a few changes the newest version offers the same functionality and are easily distinguishable. In-built Wi-Fi sharing comes in the form of a new setting in the app called Networks and it offers to link the device to other devices on the same Wi-Fi network. Once enabled, it simply requires you to access the Wi-Fi sharing option that comes up when you launch the Zinitevi app. You will then be able to enter a URL of the movie or show you want to access and view it, just like on an emulator. Click here ZiniTevi
