Pour réagir aux faits criminels très graves qui se sont déroulés lundi soir à Paris, le groupe socialiste a estimé qu'il fallait arrêter d'entraîner la population dans la peur. S'il est vrai que les citoyens sont préoccupés par la situation dans les quartiers et qu'ils ne sont pas chauds à l'idée de voir des policiers être blessés, "Je pense que les sommations se font dans le bon déroulement, tout à fait en accord avec l'esprit de la loi", a réagi la porte-parole du groupe socialiste à l'Assemblée, Marine Turchi, ce matin sur BFMTV. Une annonce importante, selon le chef du groupe socialiste au Sénat, Christophe Castaner, qui s'est rendu sur place lundi soir, au Bataclan, où se sont produits des attaques à projectiles percutant les fonctionnaires de police. Le groupe PS plaide pour "une politique commune de sécurité" et "toute idée de sommations ne relève pas du bon déroulement". Mais ils estiment que le pouvoir politique doit se tenir au courant de ces événements. "Nous devons se rappeler qu'en politique et en politique publique, cela n'a pas d'échéance, en fin
