dogSerological markers of recent human papillomavirus infection in the white population of northern Italy. Serum samples from 874 volunteers were tested by enzyme-linked immunosorbent assay (ELISA) for evidence of past or current human papillomavirus (HPV) infection.
The overall age-specific HPV prevalence was 13.6%, significantly higher than in the previous studies. HPV-6 and HPV-16 were the most common types in women (45.0% and 17.0%, respectively), while HPV-11 was the most prevalent type in men (20.9%). Overall, HPV prevalence increased from young to middle-aged adults, peaked during the 5th decade, and then declined. Infection with HPV types 16, 31, and 33 was positively associated with later age at first sexual intercourse, with increasing numbers of lifetime sexual partners, and with low socioeconomic status. These findings were confirmed in separate analyses of the three geographical areas studied. These results suggest that (1) HPV infection is widespread in the Italian population, (2) low socioeconomic status is a major risk factor for HPV infection, and (3) previous HPV vaccination may be partially effective, as demonstrated by an overall decreased HPV prevalence./* * Copyright 2018 Google Inc. * * Licensed under the Apache License, Version 2.0 (the "License"); * you may not use this file except in compliance with the License. * You may obtain a copy of the License at * * 04aeff104c
