The focus of this review is to provide an overview of MUC1, MUC4 and MUC16 in ovarian cancer. Whilst MUC16 has been investigated extensively in the past decade, MUC1 and MUC4 have only been recognized in the last 10 years or so. MUC1 is known to occur overexpressed on normal epithelium and overexpressed in a wide range of carcinomas. Furthermore, it has become clear that the MUC1 glycoprotein has an exceptionally long cytoplasmic domain. The MUC1 gene is a target for aberrant splicing of exons and ectopic expression of MUC1 exons occur in a variety of carcinomas. MUC4 has a poorly characterized glycoprotein core protein encoded by a MUC4 gene located on human chromosome 15. Overexpression of this glycoprotein occurs in a variety of cancers and is associated with some of the worst clinical outcomes. MUC4 has also been shown to interact with extracellular matrix proteins. MUC16 is a transmembrane mucin that has been shown to be a target for autoantibodies in patients with ovarian cancer. In addition to its tumor antigenicity, MUC16 is secreted to the tumor microenvironment from tumor cells. This review will cover the latest developments in the role of MUC1, MUC4 and MUC16 in ovarian cancer. In the midst of national conversation on extreme weather, including a heat wave that's scorching the Midwest, a high-profile MSNBC host came out in support of Dr. Sebastian Gorka, the former national security adviser to President Trump. And MSNBC executive producer Bill Whitaker said the network will continue to give Gorka a prominent role. Gorka was fired in February after he made comments about a European who criticized a recent New York Times article about the far-right nature of the "alt-right" — a term that many people have criticized for its association with
